GYMNASTS TO MEET TODAY AT TORONTO

McGill Men Compete With 'Varsity Athletes'

FAIR PROSPECTS

End of Intercollegiate Competition for This Year

The final events of the year in Intercollegiate sport will take place in Toronto this afternoon and evening, when the Varsity and McGill gymn teams meet for the third time. The first competition was won by Varsity in Hart House gymnasium. Last year the team secured a small lead over their opponents in the contest at Central Y. M. C. A. in Montreal. In this competition the captain, Paul Scott, and Holland secured very high standings. The present team is without these men, but will do its best to retain the championship.

Last night the team left for Toronto, accompanied by Coach Finlay. This morning they will have an opportunity to become acquainted with the more up-to-date apparatus in Hart House gymnasium, where the competition will be held. The McGill team is formed of the five men who obtained the highest standing in the apparatus and mat work only in the recent Wicksteed Competition; and not the highest total in all the events, as was erroneously reported in yesterday's Daily. The Intercollegiate competition consists of set and voluntary movements on the high horizontal bar, parallel bars, horse and mat, so it is not a Wicksteed Competition, as commonly supposed.

The practice held by the team yesterday afternoon wound up the longest season of training of any sport in college. At this practice Mr. Finlay pointed out weaknesses which were brought out during the recent competition, laid special emphasis on the proper manner of approaching and retreating from the apparatus, and stressed the numerous details constituting "form" or "polish."

Formerly the Wicksteed meet has been held a full week previous to the Intercollegiate competition, so previous teams have had a chance to correct their (Continued on Page 3.)

FRENCH COMEDY TO BE PLAYED TONIGHT

Students in French Will Produce 'Chateau Historique'

The students of the third and fourth year in French will perform the annual play of the Modern Languages Department in the Convocation Hall of the Royal Victoria College at 8.15 this evening.

"Chateau Historique," a modern French comedy from the able pen of Alexandre Bisson, is not unknown among the theatre-goers of Montreal, as it was performed near the beginning of the present season by the Theatre Parisien troupe at what was formerly the New Empire Theatre. At the end of January, when the company was about to sail for Paris, they gave "Chateau Historique" as their final performance by special request.

The three acts deal with the ingenious ruse of a discontented husband, who falls in with the plan of a friend of his to secure the return of his romantic wife's affections. There are the usual laughable cases of mistaken identity, and taken all in all, "Chateau Historique" is probably one of the most ambitious pieces that the French students have attempted to place before the public in the last four years.

REX. WIGGINS WILL BE HONORED TODAY

'Varsity Athletes Recognize Act at Harrier Meet

At nine o'clock this morning, Rex Wiggins will be presented with a gold plaque by Mr. Williams, who is representing Varsity at the Alma Mater, on behalf of a group of Toronto athletes.

It will be remembered that at the Harrier Run held last fall, Wiggins, seeing that one of the Toronto men had taken the wrong route, called out to him, and waited until his opponent caught up to him.

As a recognition for this sportsman-like act, Varsity has decided to present a gold medallion to Wiggins.

GRAVE TOPIC DISCUSSED BY TORONTO MEN

Development of Tombs in Ancient Days

ARCHAEOLOGY

The Tutankhamen Discovery Also Comes Into Address

A detailed account of the development of the different types of Egyptian tombs was given by Professor Currelly, of the Ontario Museum of Toronto last evening. Professor Currelly first explained how the idea of preserving their dead originated with the ancient Egyptians. They believed that a man consisted of three essential parts, namely, the spirit, the shadow and the body. They held the belief that the shadow was in reality a part of the man and thus by preserved and thus only one third of the man himself was lost.

From this belief the idea further developed of a king destroying the bodies of his predecessors, particularly if they were his enemies, so that when he himself died he would not be disturbed by them in the under-world. It became necessary therefore for each king to provide himself with a tomb wherein his body might be placed, and to build that tomb so that it could not be entered.

The first type of tombs were low, flat roofed buildings of stone. An example of this type is the so-called "Step" pyramid which is in reality a number of these low tombs placed on top of one another. These tombs were, however, not proof against the succeeding kings who entered and destroyed all the interior decorations, and the body of the previous king also.

Then the true pyramid was built, but was no more successful than the first type had been. After this the idea occurred to some king to build his tombs by tunnelling under the rocks which mark the division of the desert from the fertile country. These, too, were entered and devastated, and at length the idea occurred to hide the tombs. Thus came into being the valley of the tombs of the kings near the ancient city of Thebes. In this valley the famous tomb of Tutankhamen was recently opened.

Professor Currelly gave a detailed description of the interior of these different kinds of tombs, and his remarks were plentifully illustrated with excellent lantern slides.

At the close of the lecture, Dean Laing who acted as chairman, thanked the speaker on behalf of the Archaeological Society under whose auspices the lecture was given, and also on behalf of the many guests who were present.

ALMA MATER DANCE RIOT OF COLOUR

Sir Arthur and Lady Currie Present

TWO HALLS USED

Over Two Hundred Enjoy Last Dance of Season

Graced by the distinguished patronage of Sir Arthur and Lady Currie, Dean the Hon. Justice and Mrs. Greenshields, Dean and Mrs. Laing, Dean and Mrs. Adams, Dean and Mrs. Armstrong, Dean and Mrs. Thornton, and Mr. and Mrs. George Currie, the Alma Mater Dance last evening proved a fitting climax to a season which has been outstanding in its number of successful social functions.

The Union presented a very changed appearance. The prosaic plainness of the halls and stairs had been transformed by a skillful use of class insignias, flags, bunting, bright streamers, and bobbing balloons, while cosy chairs added much to the pleasure of fascinating tete-a-tetes. In the ballroom and in the lounge room—which was also used for dancing—hundreds of carefree dancers glided buoyantly over the glistening floor, producing a kaleidoscopic picture of intermingling colour. The orchestras—Adney's in the ballroom and Crocker's in the lower hall—seemed to excel themselves and good-humouredly provided encore after encore for the overjoyed couples. Altogether it was a scene of bewitching brilliancy and ecstatic gaiety.

Among the two hundred couples which comfortably filled the two halls, were representatives from sister universities while here and there could be noticed graduates once more enjoying the pleasures of a college dance. The refreshments were served in two sittings and were entirely in keeping with the brilliant gaiety of the occasion. Paper hats and balloons added to the hilarious enthusiasm and completely dispelled all signs of any stiffness which might have been evident during the first few numbers.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SPORTSMANSHIP

It is a significant fact, and one which it is very gratifying to record, that a McGill man is being honoured for an act of exceptional sportsmanship by his rivals of the University of Toronto from whom he refused to claim the advantage given him by a more intimate knowledge of the route over which the Harrier race was run last fall, and ultimately lost to the Blue-and-White trackman. The decision of the Toronto runners to present Rex Wiggins with a mark of their appreciation augurs well for the future of intercollegiate sport, and will, we think, do much to promote the best relations between the two universities. That such sporting acts win the applause of both rooters and rivals when they are brought to notice must be a source of extreme gratification to all, but what is even more pleasing is the knowledge that this is the spirit that in the main actuates all our intercollegiate teams—those from 'Varsity and the wears of the Red-and-White alike.

To Wiggins is given the satisfaction of knowing that his sporting act has won for himself the esteem, not only of his fellow students here, but also of the athletes of the University of Toronto.

RUGBY AND THE GRADUATES

The letter to be found in the present issue with reference to the future of rugby at McGill should meet the demands of the undergraduates for offers of substantial support from the graduates. Promises from such a quarter as that from which the communication originates that next year will find the men who turn out for rugby provided with the best that is to be had in the way of equipment and coaching, can be taken absolutely at its face value. Propitious though this announcement may be, the notification that graduates will be on hand to lend the encouragement of their advice and opinion, and the benefit of their experience is one that is even more potent with fortunate possibilities. When graduates and undergraduates determine and strive that McGill is to field a winning team, we may rest assured that their hopes will not go far amiss of the mark.

THE ALMA MATER

Coming as the climax to a most successful series of dances held during the past year, the Alma Mater marked the conclusion of McGill social activities for the present season. Throughout the year many of the students have enjoyed the well-arranged series of formal and informal dances, and judging by the enthusiasm that was shown last night the Alma Mater was a most fitting ending for such an exceptionally fine social season.

Everything required to make such an occasion a memorable success had been arranged by the committee in charge, and nothing was omitted that would provide more comfort or enjoyment for the large gathering that subscribed to the dance. The most tasteful decorations were made use of, in which the red and white of Old McGill predominated, and the dainty novelties, consisting of balloons, streamers and paper hats, added to the colourful scene. Excellent music provided by two orchestras and perfect dancing spaces enabled the dancers to enjoy themselves to the limit and the supper that was provided was all that could be desired.

The dance committee is to be heartily congratulated for the most efficient manner in which the details were handled and it is safe to say that they equalled if not surpassed functions of a similar nature in previous years.

TRACK CLUB CALLS FOR NEW MATERIAL

On Monday there will be a meeting of the Track Club at which the election of officers for the coming year and the discussion of the various business items that have arrived with the revival of interest in track will take place. Although the snow is still piled high on the ground at the Stadium, Coach Van Wagner has his new candidates out in the High School Gymnasium training for the coming season. With the departure of "Dave" Johnson, "Cec" Hay, Hamilton and Legg from the team, there will be lots of room for new men to make a place on the squad. These four men took 38 points in the meet this year, and it will take at least five or six men to replace these stars.

CANADIAN DEBATERS WIN

The ability of the Western Canadian to out-talk their southern neighbours is shown by the victory of U.B.C. last week. Winning by a score of 400 to 260, the British Columbia debaters decisively defeated California on the question "Resolved That France was justified in her occupation of the Ruhr Valley." The attendance at the debate was approximately one thousand. The success of the British Columbia

The problems involved in making transplants of the skin are among those which present themselves most frequently to the medical man, and students of medicine should therefore welcome this opportunity of learning more about such a practical subject. As usual, the address will be followed by an open discussion. A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested.

PAPER IS READ BY DR. SAWYER

"Physicians in Industry" Is Subject

"The introduction of staff doctors to one concern was instrumental in decreasing the time lost by workers through sickness for nine days to eleven and a half hours per year," said Dr. W. A. Sawyer, at the last of a series of lectures given under the auspices of McGill University.

Industrial medicine is not very old. A health examination of employees was first conducted by Dr. Frank Fulton, in 1906. In 1909 a similar examination was conducted by Dr. Mott of Chicago, and several hidden defects were revealed in the employees.

The three most important things in a factory are machines, materials and men, and the latter require as much care as the former, if the greatest standard of efficiency is to be attained. The worker under the handicap of even a minor ailment is practically useless.

Defective eyesight of an employer cost one concern $5,000. An instrument made by this man proved to be inaccurate, and had to be reconstructed.

The enlightened condition of paying a doctor only as long as he keeps a person well will only come when people realize that getting well is much harder than keeping in condition.

Many premature deaths could be prevented by the periodic examination of factory hands, and many insidious diseases could be stopped from spreading. Of three thousand men who recently underwent medical examination, only five per cent had no defects. Thirty-seven percent had defective vision, and the teeth of twenty-five percent required immediate treatment. If the treatment given was followed up, the result would be four-fold. There would be less sickness, a lesser number of premature deaths, greater efficiency and a higher standard of morality.

Health examination of employees can be carried out at the rate of two dollars per head, and the money thus expended will amply repay itself in a very short time.

Much has been accomplished by the industrial physician, and many men who were apparently injured beyond repair have been healed and given employment.

Industrial medicine, concluded Dr. Sawyer, should be called Industrious Medicine.

Asst. Secretary from Med. '27. Polling will take place from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

R.V.C. THEATRE NIGHT

'LEAGUE OF NATIONS' AT POLITICAL CLUB

Puddicombe and Allan Read Interesting Papers

Two very well thought out and interesting papers were read by Messrs Allan and Puddicombe, Arts '23, on the subject of the "League of Nations" to the members of the Political Economy Club on Thursday evening.

Allan briefly traced the history of the previous attempts to form a League of Nations and then gave the make-up of the League and the functions of the various parts of the League.

Nations needed a language and a law whereby they should be made force. It became the occupation of the minds of learned men what that language and law should be. Machiavelli is representative of one of the two forms which the answer took. Among the other was Cruce, who formed a design for an international council to determine disputes between the nations. Sully, the great minister of Henry IV (of Navarre), incorporated a somewhat similar scheme into the memoirs of his own life. His grand design has had not only for political philosophers but also for practical statesmen an appeal that does not seem to weaken as the ages pass. The principle of the Balance of Power was next to be seen by which the greater powers prevail and throw out the lesser. The next attempt at anything like a League of Nations was the Concert of Powers after the downfall of Napoleon.

In 1899 it was found that the first Hague Conference had done nothing so a second Hague Conference met accordingly in 1907, which endeavoured to form a Court of Arbitration to settle international disputes. This was again felt after the signing of the peace in 1919 and the minds of the peoples of all countries were predisposed in a new way to seek peace and ensure it.

The object of the League of Nations is to promote international co-operation and to achieve international peace and security. It is composed of an assembly of representatives of all the nations today except the United States and the Central Powers. The Council is a smaller and more central organ again of the Assembly. The next body is the Secretariat General or permanent international Civil Service and lastly the Permanent Court of Justice.

In conclusion Allan stated that the League of Nations is an ideal to be accomplished until all the nations of the world are given representation in it. Today it looks as if the League of Nations was just another attempt at an International Utopia which had failed as hopelessly as those suggestions of Cruce and Sully at the end of the sixteenth century.

Mr. Puddicombe then dealt with the possibility of a workable League of Nations and endeavoured to throw some doubts on the possible work of such a scheme in our present state of human development.

In his brilliant and instructive paper Puddicombe shows that one of the first questions to be settled is the individual status of each of the member nations. There seems to be three solutions to this. First, that each nation should have equal representation; next it might be suggested that nations vote according to population. But the coloured man in such an event would have an overpowering majority. The third and last means of representation is according to prestige.

But again the difficulty is almost insurmountable. Here would be what is our criterion of prestige.

The Annual Dinner of the "Daily" staff was held on Thursday in the Union Cafeteria, and the long-looked-for promotions were announced. Fifty or more scribes gathered around the festive board to enjoy the roast chicken which, according to authoritative information had been parboiling for the best part of the day.

J. L. O'Brien, President, was in the toast-master's chair, and when everyone's pangs had been assuaged, he opened the speeches and business of the meeting with a good story. After drinking the various toasts that were proposed in the usual grape-juice the president told of the various changes that were to be made in the staff.

Howard O'Hagan, the present Editor-in-Chief, goes up to the presidency next year, while S. E. Read, of the News Board, will assume the duties of Editor-in-Chief. R. F. Ogilvy, also of the News Board, succeeds to the managing editorship, in the place of Glen Craik, who graduates this summer.

The selection of the new News Board was an extremely efficient task, because of the general high efficiency of all the "cub" reporters, whose faithful and commendable efforts have set a splendid example for next year's staff to live up to. On the recommendation of the night editors, the Managing Board chose as members of the News Board C. L. Coleman, '27; A. V. Forrester, '24; H. D. MacMillan, '26; T. F. M. Newton, '25; W. B. Potter, '25; and A. D. Stark, '24. These men will be the efficiency and on the recommendation of the News Board Potter, MacMillan, Newton, Harris, Stark, Calder, Scobell and Copeland were awarded bronze "Daily" Pins. Of the News Board, Goren, Reid, Ogilvy, Smith and Egerton received silver pins, while the Managing Board were rewarded with gold pins.

Amongst those on the present staff who will graduate are Goren, Levinson, Woolcomb and Craik. Owing to his many activities around college, and to the fact that he will be taking a very heavy course next year L. C. Tombs has resigned from the News Board.

In the course of the evening toasts were proposed to the King the "Daily," the Contributors and the Graduating Staff. Many interesting stories were told after all ladies had discreetly withdrawn. The meeting closed with the singing of Alma Mater and a hearty McGill Yell.

RADIO WAS SUBJECT OF EXPOSITION

In Lecture Room of Physics Building

FULL ATTENDANCE

The lecture room of the Macdonald Physics Building was filled to capacity last evening at five o'clock, to witness a motion picture demonstration of the fundamental principles of radio, with especial reference to the audio or vacuum tube.

The pictures were shown in three instalments. The first was entirely diagrammatic, and was prefaced by the remark that radio was not the product of a burst of genius on the part of Signor Marconi, but had been brought to its present state by the painstaking research and discoveries of many scientific men. The various actions of and directions taken by waves under different circumstances was illustrated, showing the waves caused by a disturbance in water. It was explained that sound waves went through the air and matter not on the surface, while light was a wave motion in the ether. Electro-magnetic waves were shown to be oscillations of a higher frequency, and from a different source in the same medium. The mechanism of a receiving and transmitting station as then shown diagrammatically.

A picture of James Clark Maxwell, Professor of Physics in Cambridge in the last century, was then shown. He first conceived of electrical waves in the ether, but did not live to realize them. This was followed by a picture of Hertz, the German Professor who discussed Hertzian waves, and then a likeness of Sir Oliver Lodge, the great English scientist, was shown. Edison, the next scientist whose picture was shown, first discovered that electrons are given off from a heated filament.

Radio waves were shown to be produced by the audio or vacuum.

The principle of electric resonance was next demonstrated by means of a diagrammatic representation of the telephone transmitter and receiver. Signor Marconi was the man who made possible commercial radio when he discovered radio waves after connecting his apparatus with the ground.

The concluding picture showed the transmitting plant of the Toronto Daily Star, the largest and most efficient in Canada. An orchestra a baritone, a contralto and an operatic tenor were shown broadcasting, also two children listening to the bedtime story, then was shown the four large 2 kilowatt audio tubes which made this possible.

At the conclusion of the picture R. J. Clarke announced that it was through the kindness of Commander Edwards, and Mr. Fraser of the Western Electric Company, that the films had been shown to the university students.

ACTIVITIES OF FENCING CLUB

Prizes Offered by Professor Nobbs for Foil Artists

Now that the ski-season is coming to a close, the Fencing Club is making a great effort to have a really good wind-up in its season. Fencing is being carried on every afternoon in the Diocesan College Gymnasium from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., with Mr. Raimondi in charge. From now until the end of the season more attention will be paid to epee fencing out of which the members will derive a great deal more fun; moreover, beginners will not be precluded from trying their hands at the game.

Provided that sufficient men turn out between now and the end of April to ensure a good competition, Professor Nobbs has very kindly offered to present some valuable fencing material for prizes to be contested for at the end of the season. The Fencing Club is greatly indebted to Professor Nobbs for the interest he takes in it, and the executive are very anxious that a good number of men will turn out for the few weeks left. It will then be possible to have a good competition together with some sort of social event before the club closes its activities.

The attention of students is drawn to the fact that no previous experience is necessary in order to join the club now, and they are asked to bring their friends as membership is not restricted to undergraduates of McGill. A special arrangement has been made with the Department of Physical Education whereby students taking fencing can have it credited to their attendance instead of gymnasium.

All information can be obtained during practice hours in the gymnasium at 743 University Street, or from C. R. Fielding, the fencing manager at the same address, telephone Up. 1475.

ALL PLAYERS FOR THEATRE NIGHT CALLED

Complete Programme Will Be Rehearsed Today

2:15-4:15 P.M.

Everyone Must Appear at Proper Time

This afternoon a complete rehearsal of all the acts to be presented at the McGill Theatre Night next Thursday will take place. Up to date only one attempt has been made to stage a complete rehearsal and this one was not entirely successful inasmuch as several of the players in various acts were unable to appear. However, with the big night only a few days away, it is absolutely essential that everybody be up for the rehearsal this afternoon. The orchestra will be on hand and everything will be done to run things off exactly as they will be presented Thursday night.

The following is the time scheduled for today's rehearsal:

Law	2:15 p.m.
Dentistry	2:30 p.m.
Medicine	2:45 p.m.
R.V.C.	3:00 p.m.
M.S.P.E.	3:15 p.m.
Commerce	3:30 p.m.
Arts	3:45 p.m.
Faculty	4:00 p.m.
Science	4:15 p.m.

In addition to the complete rehearsal being staged this afternoon, two more will be carried out Thursday, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. The morning rehearsal will be with a bare background, while a full dress together with the necessary stage settings will be carried out in the afternoon.

The outstanding feature of the coming Theatre Night is that the programme throughout will be the work of McGill students entirely. In previous years McGill night has been more or less of an attendance in a body at one of the regular shows in town, the students not taking any part in the programme other than giving the well-known McGill yell and raising a little commotion. This year, the night promises to be of unusual interest with McGill staging the show and forming the audience. At the rate tickets have been selling the capacity of the theatre will be taxed to the limit, and during the course of the next few days the house should be pretty well sold out.

The whole Theatre Night project has been organized by the Students' Council, and carried out by an Undergraduate committee, consisting of A. J. Skelley, chairman; Miss K. Gilmore, Miss Joan Foster, E. W. Willard, N. D. Hall, Jack Woodman, William Pratt, Blake Wilson, Moore Kelly, R. B. Henry and H. Hyman.

The rehearsals are being carried out under the able direction of Mr. W. A. Tremayne, assisted by an advisory committee as follows: Professor F. S. Lloyd, chairman; Dr. Villard, Professor B. K. Sandwell, Dr. C. J. MacMillan, Dr. Lamb and Mlle. Touren.

Mr. Harold E. Key has worked tirelessly in rounding the orchestra into shape and under his able supervision the musicians have come on wonderfully. A very admirable programme of music has been arranged, the feature of which will be a specially composed march, and the Nocturne from 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.'

The athletic review, which will be one of the main features of the programme promises to be of a very interesting nature. The men who have distinguished themselves prominently in athletic circles will appear on the stage and the inspiring display of athletic talent will be sure to do much to further sport at McGill.

PREJUDICES.

We naturally assume that most students study some course for the good which they can derive from it, and for the interest which they have in the particular subject. The fluctuation in the size of the classes in several languages at Ohio State University during and after the war, however, would tend to disprove this assumption. Statistics show that the enrollment in German classes at that university dropped from 1,240 before the war, to 61 at the time the United States became actively engaged in the struggle. Of the latter number, only seven were in elementary courses. Then came the armistice and with it a marked increase in the size of the German classes. On the other hand, one year of the war shot the enrollment in French classes from 1,038 to 2,149. After the war the number slumped.

Assuming that those twelve hundred students elected to study German because they considered it of value to them in future years, why should the fact that Germany was our enemy decrease the value of the German language? Its value to the chemist and to the scientist was not lessened. Or why should the fact that France became our ally during the war increase the value of the French language? The reaction in class sizes following the war naturally points to the fact that personal and national prejudice, to a great extent, influences our thoughts and actions regardless of true value.

HARVARD PROFESSOR TO ADDRESS FORUM

At the Peoples' Forum, held in the Church of the Messiah, corner of Sherbrooke Street West and Simpson Street, next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the speaker will be Professor Manley O. Hudson of Harvard University. His topic will be "The Front Door of the League of Nations." No man on this continent is better qualified to speak of the League of Nations than Professor Hudson, who served as one of President Wilson's advisors at the Peace Conference, was of the original secretariat of the League of Nations and does special work for that body at Geneva every summer. Professor Hudson is Professor of Law at Harvard University, specializing in international law.

The change of hour from evening to afternoon is necessary because Professor Hudson must return to Cambridge Sunday night.

GRADUATES BEHIND THE RUGBY CLUB

Reassuring Letter from Jack Lewis

PROSPECTS GOOD

Training Facilities Will Be of Best Next Fall

The following article was written for, and sent to, the McGill Daily by Jack Lewis, a former star football player of McGill, and one for whom graduation has not meant cessation of connection with his Alma Mater. He has been active as an assistant to Coach Frank Shaughnessy, and the write-up to be found below is evidence that his activity and interest for the college covers a wider field than that of attending practices as a supervisor. The following was received at the Daily Office last night:

JACK LEWIS

Former Rugby Star Active in Interest of Football.

Montreal, March 15, 1923.

The Editor, McGill Daily, Montreal:

Dear Sir,—In all probability the receipt by you at this time of the year of a letter concerning football and prospects for the intercollegiate season of 1923 will prove a bit of a surprise. To the layman it might seem quite odd to discuss football while still very apparently in the depth of winter, but to an enthusiast keenly interested in the success of his Alma Mater, needless to say in every way, but more particularly on the gridiron, it is the right and proper time to give to the student body some idea, even though it may not be very concise nor definite, of plans which are being considered for the following autumn. It is but a few weeks before the College breaks up for the summer recess, and, unless advantage is taken of this short period to assure the undergraduates that every effort is being made by those interested to see that there is no recurrence of last season's disasters, they will probably have the impression during the summer holidays that the College will again trail along as a tail ender.

This is an unhealthy state of affairs, as it results in the student returning to college in the early autumn as a pessimist and potential knacker. Goodness knows there have been "enough," which might almost be termed "too many," of this variety of "supporter" during the past two years when the championship has been noticeable by its absence. What the student should realize is that the graduate body and the faculty are right behind the Football Club, and that it only remains now for the students to get in line also and the result will be a season to which all will some day look back with pride and satisfaction.

Though the season 1922 has been referred to above as disastrous, this should in no way be considered as a reflection on the players who took part in the games and practices, and who put forth every effort to see that the College was well and ably represented. It was more due to a combination of circumstances beyond their control, circumstances which prevented them from reaching the state of football perfection nowadays required in intercollegiate games.

One of the most important of these was the question of accommodation. Unfortunately, the new field-house at the Stadium was not ready in time for the opening of the season. This necessitated using a temporary and thoroughly inadequate quarters in the Union, and practising on the lower campus, with a shift in the middle of the season to the uncompleted field-house on the Stadium grounds. Such a move and at such a time was most unfortunate.

Also, there was insufficient equipment to go around, which meant innumerable delays in the practices, to say nothing of the general scramble and dissatisfaction created every day when players turned out for practices and found that the equipment they used the day before had been "swiped." Though every effort had been made during the preceding two or three weeks to have graduates turn out and assist Frank Shaughnessy with the coaching, it was found that apparently the eligible ones were too busy or the time given them in which to make a decision was too short, for the results were not very encouraging. For one or even two coaches to handle as many as were turning out on some afternoons, one day in particular ninety by actual count, and to make each player feel that he was being given a fair chance was almost beyond the realms of possibility. The immediate results to be attained were to see that the first team was as strong as possible, and paying particular attention to the contenders for places on this team naturally meant that the other lesser lights were practically ignored. This was most fortunate, as the ultimate idea in having football at the College is to see that as many players as possible are developed, not only for the sake of the intercollegiate games, but as a means of giving them a healthy outdoor exercise. The result of this lack of attention and assistance towards development was that as the season progressed the number attending practices gradually fell off, until at one time there were barely sufficient to form two squads, and thus have a practice scrimmage. The consequence was that towards the end of the season the effort towards having a good team on the football field was made by a few only. This falling off was possibly due also to a lack of support from the student body. It was not found that any man who had a smattering of or leaning towards football was turning out voluntarily. Time and again the college had to be combed for likely prospects, and then these prospects had to be induced with a great deal of pleading to turn out. If the student body gave a proper and enthusiastic support the tables would be turned and not only would all the players turn out of their own accord, but there would also be a flock of would-be players, who, with proper coaching, would in a very short time develop no doubt into a great acquisition. In the past, support of the second and third teams has been pathetic. As they are feeders to the first and most important team, their support is essential.

A still further reason for the falling off in attendance was no doubt due to the fact that the students not in the first or second football squads heretofore felt that if lectures had been missed there would have been a resultant loss of academic standing.

The above conditions have been recognized by the local graduates, who, to say the least, feel very deeply regarding the destinies of the Football Club. With a view to finding some remedy and giving their Alma Mater the support on the football field which is given by graduates of the other important universities, a meeting was recently held in Montreal of old and recent players, at which a five hour discussion took place with a view to overcoming obstacles which in the past have stood in the way of success.

Considering the difficulties as above enumerated, all know that the accommodation for next season will be of the best, the field-house now being completed and ready for the approaching season. New equipment will be available, and each player having his own locker will be in a position to take part in the practice ten or fifteen minutes after arrival at Stadium. Several former players of the first team have signified their intention of turning out as assistant coaches. All these assistant coaches have been prominent in their day as players with a thorough knowledge of the game and experience on the field. With them on hand every aspirant to a position on any of the teams will be given every attention and instruction, with a view to making him proficient at the game. In addition, there will be a number of assistant managers, fellows who are unable for some reason or other to take an active part in the practices. These assistant managers will be responsible for the "off-field" organization, and the most promising are to be chosen as managers for the various teams for the ensuing years. Several conferences have been held with the Principal, with a view to receiving the hearty support of the faculties, and though at the present moment nothing definite can be announced, the reception of the Graduate Committee has been most sympathetic, and it is hoped that arrangements will eventually be made whereby a student will be permitted to attend practices without a loss of standing in his class, providing, of course, he is willing and anxious to make up for the lost time in private study.

The purpose of this letter is mainly to assure the student body that the graduates are taking energetic action to see that the season of 1923 is not a repetition of that just gone by. It is hoped that before the closing exercises some definite announcements may be made in your columns with reference to matters above discussed.

Yours very sincerely,

JACK LEWIS.

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

Recently there has been many thefts from the university "candy and fruit stands." A freshman has stolen one apple; a graduate student stole 30 cents' worth of candy; a co-ed one apple and two other freshmen fifteen cents of fruit.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for the sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communications from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length. Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office—that they write upon ONE SIDE OF THE PAPER ONLY.

The Editor,

McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—After perusing the appended article, which appeared in one of the city papers yesterday, I find it exceedingly hard to contain myself, and feel that any endeavour to adequately express my opinions upon the matter in your Correspondence Column would meet with but scant success. Having gathered a general idea, from the description afforded the perpetrator of the scheme, and presuming my conclusions on this to be correct, I am all the more astounded at the sentiments attributed to the young man in question, as I believe myself to be reasonably acquainted with his inclinations and associations.

The article referred to follows:

UGH! STUDENTS TAKE BIT BETWEEN TEETH AGAINST FAIR CO-EDS.

Twenty stern young males have handed themselves to bar Cupid from McGill University and have formed a protective "Society for the Welfare of Male Students." Its members solemnly pledge themselves never to marry college women.

The society declares itself absolutely necessary for the protection of the younger men in college as embryo judges, prime ministers, ministers, bishops, authors, fellows of the Royal Society, and others, all eager to scale the heights of fame, attend the University. Along comes a fair co-ed. She smiles; he looks; she turns; he follows; and another promising young career crumbles to ruin on the altar of early matrimony.

Poor Co-ed.

It is against the fair co-ed, not woman in general that the ring of defence has been formed. "We are not woman-haters," the president of the society, a good looking young law aspirant said with an apologetic look in his blue eyes. "But we don't believe in the co-ed. We find that she detracts from the main issue for which we come to college. We come here to study, to prepare ourselves for a career, and the co-ed makes the fellows forget the main issue. They start making "dates and appointments" and their work suffers. Then, as soon as they leave the university, they get married and "it's all up with their prospects of making a career." They disappoint their parents; they are weighed down by family ties before they have started making their way and then "goodbye" to their ambitions.

The co-ed might have ideas of a career and ambitions of her own but the president was sceptical. "She has when she starts," he admitted gloomily. "She comes here full of ideas about independence and a career, but she loses all that before she has been here very long, and then she starts looking out for a college man for a husband. So we've just got to protect the young fellows coming in and give them their chance in life without being handicapped from the very start by the feminine idea, "the twenty-two year old Socrates" declared.

Lack Domesticity.

Granted that the co-ed might cause a young man's fancy to stray sadly from the paths indicated by his professors, it still seemed obscure why college women should be barred as wives after undergrads had miraculously escaped and were well on in their distinguished careers. But the president was ready with more light.

"We are not going to choose college women for our wives," he declared, "because college women have not got the domestic ideal. After lecturing at college a girl wants to go to parties and indulge in pleasure generally; she hasn't the inclination for home duties." The girl who had been living at home had some tastes and home graces and that was the kind of girl they mean to marry.

"The fact is," he said, "we don't believe in too much higher education for women. Music, of course, and some of the lighter arts, perhaps, but no research or anything of that kind; as for co-education in universities, we emphatically disbelieve in it. We object especially to co-education in the Faculties of Medicine and Law.

"Some of our studies in these subjects have to be missed out altogether because there are women students present."

The brave twenty are keeping their identity a dead secret and the fraternity dining-room was thrown into an uproar and the betrayer of secrets dragged out by the scruff of the neck when inquiries were made yesterday as to their identity. But they will meet in a body fortnightly in a place as yet unknown, to report "how they have kept off."

The co-eds are silent. But their smile says: "Wait and See"

Trusting that you may find room to insert this in to-morrow's issue, and if so thanking you for your consideration, I am,

Yours Very Truly,

ONE OF THE SLANDERED.

Montreal, March 15, 1923.

The Editor,

McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—May I express, through your paper, my sincere thanks to all those who supported me in the recent elections.

I would also like to thank those who were my opponents, for their kind wishes expressed in this morning's paper.

The note of congratulation which I received from Mr. Quackenbush last night gave me more pleasure than even the result of the elections.

If I have one regret in connection with the elections it is that Mr. Quackenbush was not elected, too.

Ile and I worked on practically the same platform, so I hope his followers will now see fit to give me the support they would have given him.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for allowing me space for my maiden letter to the Daily.

Yours faithfully,
ERROL AMARON.

Editor, McGill Daily:

Sir,—May I express, through your columns, my appreciation of the true sportsmanship of Mr. Clause Simpson, who, having tied with me in the election for Secretary of the Union House Committee, has withdrawn in my favour? We were both of the opinion that we had both "won" the election, and it remained only to decide which of us would assume the office. I therefore wish it clearly understood that there is no more credit due me than to Mr. Simpson on this occasion, merely because it fell my lot to assume the office. My effort will be to try to carry out the duties of the office to the satisfaction of Mr. Simpson and the entire student body. Thanking my supporters, and with sincere regrets to Mr. Simpson and Mr. Kent, I am,

Yours truly,
BEVERLEY C. LEECH.

McGill Union,
March 16, 1923.

Editor, McGill Daily:

Sir,—I wish to take this opportunity to publicly congratulate Mr. Beverley C. Leech on the splendid spirit of sportsmanship he showed in the late election. I wish to congratulate him on his success, and promise him my whole-hearted support in any capacity in which he sees fit to serve student interests.

I wish the student body to clearly understand that our method of deciding "who was to do the work" was of mutual consent. I hope that the student body will see the matter as we do, and that they will appreciate that he did not treat the question with levity.

An expression of equal confidence in our ability was manifested by the undergraduate body on Wednesday and we consider that our method of decision was wise and just.

Let me thank all those students who honored me with their support, and let me assure them that they have, in Mr. Leech a good man, a true sport, who will serve them to the very best of his ability.

I also congratulate Mr. Kent on his excellent spirit during the campaign. Thanking you for space,

I am,

Yours truly,
J. CLAUDE SIMPSON.

The Editor,

McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—May I, through the medium of the "Daily" convey my congratulations to the successful candidates in yesterday's elections; to Messrs. Simpson and Leech in particular.

My supporters throughout the campaign have my most sincere thanks.

Yours truly,

KENNETH M. KENT.

Editor,

McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—Through the medium of your columns I wish to tender my heartiest congratulations to Mr. Little, the Vice-President of the Union. I am certain that the students have a representative worthy of the position.

And may I also extend my warmest thanks to those who supported me.

Yours truly,

W. B. BREWER.

The Editor,

McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who supported me in my recent election to the Athletic Governing Board, and I will endeavour to return their confidence to the best of my ability, with a careful consideration of all athletic matters affecting those who I am pleased to serve.

Yours very sincerely,

REG. HENRY.

THEATRE NIGHT

"Twas a good show—"The Aviation Minstrels" and the Urbana Elks did well. A little shy, perhaps, and a trifle modest in their first public appearance, they, nevertheless, amused, entertained and satisfied a well-filled house at the Illinois theatre last night.

The programme consisted of latest song hits, rendered first by individuals and later by the chorus. "Strutters", black-face comedy, Roman skits, Egyptian dances, had their places in the programme.—Daily Illini.

If we let it be presumed that some solution has been arrived at in this question of representation a new question would arise as to the enforcement of the will of the league's governing body. It would be necessary to form a police force. With such a force at its command the League would cease to become a League of Nations but would be a state.

At the conclusion of Puddicombe's

KING COOK WAS FETED BY MED. '27

Tobin Is Crowned by Medicals for Twelfth Time

BIG HALL FILLED

Members of Staff Present at Traditional Function

Over five hundred medical students attended the seventy-second annual coronation of King Cook in the Assembly Hall of the New Medical Building last Thursday night. The incomparable Tobin was again the chief actor. This year marks his twentieth anniversary in the services of the Medical Faculty and the twelfth function that he has been honoured at by the juvenile anatomists. The show is put on by the Sophomore class, this year by Medicine '27; and as the mysteries of anatomy are just being thrust upon them, part of the programme is usually taken up with an operation theatre scene. Indeed no less a personage than Shakespeare was seen in the role of a surgeon, which he carried out to the great amusement of the audience. Music and songs were scattered throughout the evening's entertainment and those who had taken the opportunity of attending were satisfied with the variety of the show.

The last scene was shown in a local public institution with many well known characters portrayed. Here, finally, King Cook was crowned amid the laughter of lax merry-making students. A pot of glue containing a substantial sum of money in twenty-five cent pieces was then presented to Tobin for his services and he responded by rendering his favorite melody, "We All Went Home in a Taxi."

Programmes giving a resumé of the history of the tradition were also a source of mirth to the onlookers. Several well known firms held out alluring adds in the programmes.

Today the Medical Building presents its every-day appearance. Everyone has recovered from the historic spree, and as Tobin says, "I've been King Cook for twelve years, and it's just like taking a meal to me now."

paper Dr. Leacock addressed a few words to members of the club, clearing up some of the perplexing points and throwing new light on the subject. After a lively discussion the members enjoyed refreshments of ice cream, cake and drinks, due to the beneficence of Dr. Leacock.
